Regional Natural History & Travel

Andy Swash and Robert Still return with the second edition of their pocket-sized zoological field guide Birds, Mammals and Reptiles of the Galapagos Islands to consolidate its position as a vital accompaniment on any trip to the Ecuadorian archipelago. On the other side of the world, and every bit as compelling as the Galapagos, lies another island hub of biodiversity research. The hundreds of endemic species, conservation initiatives and the human culture of this island chain are the topics for the beautifully crafted Socotra. Closer to home, the ongoing success of the New Naturalist series looks set to continue in 2007 with Galloway and the Borders whilst the re-issue of Animal Tracks and Signs provides a useful guide for naturalists wishing to learn how to examine and identify animal tracks.
